COOKIES POLICY

Angra HK Limited ("Angra" or "the Company") uses cookies, aiming at making optimum and safer use of Angra.money platform and the services provided through it.

The first time a user visits Angra's platform, Angra will inform the user of the cookies and that by continuing to browse Angra's platform users are implying their consent to use cookies. A cookie is a very small text file placed on users' computers, that allows Angra to distinguish users. The cookies help to provide users with a good experience when they browse the Company platform.

Cookies include information that a platform (more specifically, the web server) stores on a user's computer, so that each time the user logs on the Angra platform, the latter retrieves the information stored and offers related services to the user.

Angra.money uses cookies that are deleted from the device used to access the platform as soon as navigation ends and the browser closes, as well as, cookies that remain stored on this system even after the completion of the particular navigation and allow this action to be identified the next time the user will visit the angra.money platform.

The cookies' serve the service provision through angra.money in the safest and easiest way for the platform's users:

(a) by identifying users as registered ones;

(b) by maintaining the information entered by users during their previous visits to angra.money (in order for users to be easier and more properly logged in the angra.money platform during their next visit);

The Company uses a variety of cookies. Strictly necessary cookies only – these are cookies that are required for the operation of Angra platform. They include, for example, cookies that enable the user to log into secure areas of Angra platform. Analytical/performance cookies – these allow the Company to recognise and count the number of visitors and to see how visitors move around angra.money platform when they are using it. This helps to improve the way Angra platform works. Functionality cookies – these are used to recognise a user. This enables to personalise Angra platform's content for users, by remembering users' preferences (for example, choice of language or region).

Please note that users may block cookies by activating the setting on their browser that allows them to refuse the setting of all or some cookies. However, if users employ their browser settings to block all cookies, they may not be able to access all or parts of Angra's platform.
